"The glorious strains of gospel music wash over the West Bank in Connie Field's potent film. An impassioned cultural exchange ensues, new friendships are forged and attitudes are altered. A rousing portrait of the changes unfolding in the Middle East as a nonviolent movement grows in Palestine, this dynamic and complex work is born of a brilliantly simple and potent idea: what would happen if African-American Christians—the same group who served as exemplars of the Civil Rights Movement—could witness first-hand the plight of Palestinians today? One of the ten most popular films at this year's festival."

—Vancouver International Film Festival

"The film is a tremendous achievement - brilliant and beautiful."

— Professor Clay Carson, Stanford University
